

Certified Orthotist Joins Virginia Prosthetics, Inc

Jeff Henderson, C.O., recently joined Roanoke-based Virginia Prosthetics, Inc., as a Certified Orthotist. Henderson will see patients at the company's Charlottesville office, as well as at the company's Harrisonburg and Fishersville offices. A graduate of Northwestern University Medical School's Department of Orthotics and Prosthetics, he is certified by the American Board for Prosthetics and Orthotics.

"Jeff's addition to the Charlottesville office enables us to better serve the company's growing base of orthotic patients throughout the Charlottesville and Albemarle County area," said J. Douglas Call, President and Owner of Virginia Prosthetics, Inc.

Henderson completed his undergraduate work at West Chester University in West Chester, Penn., where he received a Bachelor of Science degree, and he was recently selected as the 2012 Dale Yasukawa Scholarship Winner by the Orthotic & Prosthetic Activities Foundation.

Henderson is an active volunteer for a variety of amputee support groups and events, including a 5K race to benefit relief efforts and funding for prosthetics in Haiti, and orthotic and prosthetic service trips to Central America.

Virginia Prosthetics, Inc. serves numerous locations throughout southwest and central Virginia and North Carolina. Founded in Roanoke in 1966, the company is Virginia's oldest and largest O&P provider, helping patients believe in their possibilities through the use of advanced prosthetic and orthotic technology.
